A GOOD SELECTION

For many years Salem has been favored with a board of education personnel representative of the best interests of the schools and of the city. The editor's memory takes him back to the days of such members as Stephen Richards, L. B. French, A. O. Silver and others of their day whose first thought was the most progressive school system that could be provided for a city of Salem's size. In more recent years the high calibre of board members has been maintained and the result is a school system that ranks with the best in Ohio.

Judge Joel H. Sharp, who resigned from the board when he became common pleas judge the first of the year, measured up to the best of those who carefully guided the course of the Salem public schools in the last 40 years. To fill his unexpired term the other board members have chosen a man well qualified to fill the niche. George Lozier, superintendent of the Electric Furnace Co., has proven his worth in a great many capacities in the last few years. He is a man of sound judgment and of keen discernment and he will add stability to the already well-balanced board.

It is a mark of tribute to any man as busy as Mr. Lozier and the other members of the school board that he should give of his time and talents to help shape the course of the public schools without pay or compensation of any kind. So long as Salem has men of this type as members of the board, it may feel assured that the progress of its public school system will not suffer.

GARNER'S LAST STAND

In a matter of a few more weeks there will be a new vice president of the United States, which makes an excuse to observe that as the reserve champion of the Democratic party for the last eight years, lacking two months, John Nance Garner underwent one of the most dramatic transformations in American history.

To be accurate, almost everything else changed, while Mr. Garner remained the same. Now that it's all over and he's wearing his cutaway coat and striped pants overtime to get the good out of them before Jan. 20, perhaps he will write an autobiography. Herewith is a standing order for a copy of the first printing.

In 1932, the Democratic party needed a far western vote-getter to pep up the ticket and lift some of the curse off a presidential candidate with too much Harvard holly-toy and Hyde Park country squiring in his background. Cautious party heelers thought Garner was pretty radical and might scare away conservative voters, but after all a man who had chummed up with Nick Longworth, the eminently respectable Republican, couldn't be utterly irresponsible. So he was given second place on the ticket. They were careful to point out, wherever and whenever it seemed expedient, that the Garners were big money folks down in Texas. The "wild man," so wild he couldn't be trusted to speak on the radio after one shivery speech, got elected along with Franklin D. Roosevelt.

What happened after that is current history, the story of the New Deal. John N. Garner became the conservative hope of the country and Franklin D. Roosevelt, the Hyde Parker, became the radicals' best friend. Long before 1940, the new era swept past Mr. Garner and left him standing there like an old suit of armor—but he didn't really know how rusty his ideas were till he tried to block the third term movement. If a fellow ever could hear the real inside story of how Garner got side-tracked by his party, he'd know everything about politics in the last eight years worth knowing.

THE ULTIMATE EMERGENCY

It is submitted for the study of all parties concerned that the discrepancy between what President Roosevelt tried to do in his message to congress and what he actually did do is more important than the message itself.

The task confronting the chief executive is that of providing dynamic leadership. He must discover how to transfer dynamism from himself to the country, the way Winston Churchill seems to be doing in Great Britain, the way Adolf Hitler transferred it in Germany.

The President was going to accomplish this feat in two stages. First, his "fireside chat" was going to build a fire under public opinion, so to speak, and get it moving rapidly toward an all-out war effort. Then his message to congress was to perform the same service for congress.

Mr. Roosevelt has made two excellent speeches; it would be hard to improve on them. The "fireside chat" was well received, and there is no reason to suppose the message to congress won't be well received too when it has been mulled over and digested. But no one could say either of the speeches "electrified" the country, which is presumably what Mr. Roosevelt was trying to do. The situation is significant.

There are two apparent explanations for it. One is that Americans understand fully what they are expected to do—what they must do—and are proceeding to do it with a minimum of fuss and bother. Chief thing wrong with this explanation is that no one believes it. The country is not making an all-out effort to prepare itself, to furnish aid for Great Britain, or to do what needs to be done to keep Germany from becoming the unchallenged master of the world. It is in acute danger of repeating the now classic mistake of Great Britain: Too little and too late.

The other explanation, less pleasant, seems closer to the facts. President Roosevelt has chosen to exercise political leadership for eight years by proclaiming one emergency after another. He now has come to the ultimate emergency without the personal means of proclaiming it. Like the boy who cried, "Wolf!" to see the people get excited, he lacks the means to get them excited when the wolf is really at hand. There is an immediate necessity for taking the President at his word. The danger is real. Down deep in their hearts, even the cynics and scoffers know it's real; they're carping at Mr. Roosevelt to keep up their courage.

It's impossible for anyone to know exactly what would awaken the United States overnight to the necessity of dealing with production for its own defense and the defense of Great Britain until its own defense is ready more energetically. The British didn't snap out of it till a potential invader was bombarding them and holding their island in a state of siege. They were badly led, badly organized, badly prepared to meet the ultimate emergency that fate had prepared for them. Pondering how close they came to going under—how perilously close they still are to defeat—each American in his own heart, regardless of what political leaders do or don't say, must form his own resolution to do what needs to be done to save the values he cherishes. Apathy must be routed not by the black magic of oratory but by the personal determination of millions of men who don't intend to lose any struggles by default.

THE STARS SAY:

For Thursday, January 9

EXCELLENT prospects are found among the astral auguries for this day, which may bring definite progress in giving an expansive and stabilizing spur to plans and objectives of major scope. These may be in cooperation with very large corporations, or with political, diplomatic or fraternal bodies in which sagacity, subtlety and finesse may be successful rather than indulging in strenuous, aggressive and reckless methods, or in other forms of excess, agitation or lack of control. Be calm and subtle in all circumstances.

If It Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is may have a very important year with definite progress made in connection with large corporations or diplomatic, political or secret organizations where tact, shrewdness, strategy take precedence over open, aggressive, forceful, quarrelsome or violent methods. With control, reserve and calm judgments there are signs of unusual prospects for expanding the interests and putting the fortunes on secure and enduring bases. Conservative and cautious measures win out over impetuosity and high pressure. Be wise with writings and signatures.

A child born on this day should have much ingenuity, creative ability and keen insight, with sound judgment, although it may be impetuous, aggressive and overzealous, perhaps quarrelsome and rash.

Once having done our duty, it is not a bad idea to look around for minor chores that may still need doing.

MEDICINES EASE THE COMMON COLD

But They Don't Always Cure, Says Clendening

BY LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

Colds are exasperating things, according to a lifelong student of the subject—one reason, according to him, being that a cold never kills. He, being a doctor, likes to have a disease around that occasionally exerts some authority. He continues by saying that the cold is so common—or rather, so prevalent—that no one is interested in

Dr. Clendening will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

Statistics indicate that colds cause more loss from business than all other illnesses combined. Perhaps, he says, loss of time from work but not from going shopping or going to the movies or a game of bridge.

Then, he says, it refuses to submit to any known therapeutic or preventive measure. Remember that this is an authority speaking, a lifelong student, not me, so don't write me indignant letters.

Expectorants There are a good many things, however, we can do to make a person with a cold more comfortable, even if we can't exactly cure it. Among these, if it is a coughing cold, are cough mixtures. Expectorants, your doctor calls them.

There are a good many medicines, herbs, roots, salts and combinations that are or have been used as expectorants. An expectorant may be defined as a medicine which aids in the removal of mucus or exudate from the bronchi or trachea by causing a more active secretion or making the sputum more liquid or less tenacious.

Among these is good old, tried ammonium chloride. Few cough medicines are without it. It is taken into the stomach and secreted through the mucous lining of the bronchial tubes, making the secretion more fluid and less tenacious. It is, therefore, indicated in a tight cold. It is usually dissolved in a syrup. Among other properties, it tends to make the body acid, and according to some students of the subject, the body chemistry is alkaline during a cold, so that is another favorable action.

Terpene hydrate is another of these, having, as the name suggests, a kind of turpentine action.

Habitual Coughing In the course of time most coughs get to be more of a habit. A cough, of course, is really a defensive reaction—nature's method of getting infectious material out of the body. But when you have coughed and coughed and coughed, your larynx and throat get sore and irritated and produce a cough by reflex action. This habit cough has no usefulness because it does not depend on the stimulus of secretions in the bronchial tubes. Here is where the soothing remedies to the larynx come in, and among the best are the syrups. Syrup of wild cherry is my own favorite, but there are many others such as syrup of tolu, syrup of licorice, syrup of orange, and syrup of hydropic acid. They depend for their soothing effect largely on the sugar content, but they are basic ingredients of most of your cough mixtures.

Questions and Answers

E. D.: "How can I stop my eyebrows from falling out? There are yellow particles in them."

Answer—There is probably an infection in the hair follicles and these should be treated with germicidal ointment, such as ammoniated mercury. It will take medical advice to determine what the infection is and what is the best germicide.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Dr. Clendening has seven pamphlets which can be obtained by readers. Each pamphlet sells for 10 cents. "TRIAL WITHOUT JURY"

By JAMES RONALD

CHAPTER TWENTY-SIX

A wave of jubilation swept Sergeant Feathers. This was his first big chance and things were shaping well for him. If it should turn out that Simon Osborne were guilty, there would certainly be promotion in store for the Clevel officer who unmasked him.

"You're sure of that? He couldn't have returned without you knowing it?"

"Not a chance, young feller."

"He might have been in New York and not come home."

"Not him. Where would he get the money to sleep anywhere else for two nights? He's always broke. Take it from me, Monday morning was when he came home. I stepped out for a drink at eleven and ran into him."

"Your name please?" said Feathers, producing a notebook.

Cissy Glett.

"You'll hear more of this later, Miss Glett."

"Mrs. Glett," she corrected him sharply, and added: "You keep after him, young feller, he's the man you want."

"You sound as though you'd be glad if he were hung."

"I wouldn't shed no tears, you can bet your life on that. The fuss he makes if I take a drop of whiskey for my rheumatism! Simon Osborne is one mean man, you can bet sure! You can hang him and welcome!"

"Have you any idea when he'll be home?"

"He'll be home when the bars close, if he can walk. 'Goo' night!"

Sergeant Feathers walked away, determined to return later and interview Simon Osborne even if it meant missing his last train home, but when he rounded the corner into the next street he heard someone shouting: "Mr. Osborne! Hi! I want a word with you!"

Stopping short, Feathers turned and saw a hatless man run out of a cigar store and hurry after a middle-aged individual who was apparently oblivious to the shouts, for he went on with a nonchalant air.

When the man from the cigar store caught up with him and gripped his arm, he looked round with a start and a broad smile creased his face.

"My dear fellow! This is a pleasant surprise. I've been meaning for days to drop in on you. How are you? And your wife? Don't tell me she's still got that old bronchial trouble?"

"Look here, Mr. Osborne!" said the exasperated storekeeper, "I want my money. It's over a year—"

"My dear fellow," replied Simon, "I'm terribly sorry. In my confidence, as one of my old and valued friends, I'll tell you the candid truth—"

"You've been telling me the candid truth for twelve months and I still haven't got my money. I don't want any more of your stalling. Do I get my money or don't I?"

"You embarrass me," said Simon, shutting his eyes as though in pain.

"Never mind that. Do I—"

"I'll be frank with you," said Simon. "It's like this—"

The rest escaped Feathers, for Simon lowered his voice to a confidential whisper. The store keeper reluctantly retraced his steps—having obtained no satisfaction—and his shameless debtor, with a bland and princely air, continued in the direction of the bar. Sergeant Feathers touched his shoulder as he reached out to open the door.

"Mr. Simon Osborne?"

Before replying, Simon eyed him from head to foot. Not to be outdone, Feathers returned the appraising glance.

Simon frowned. "You don't look like a process served," he said.

"I'm not. I'm a police sergeant."

"Some of my best friends are cops," said Simon cordially, shaking his hand warmly. "Charmed to meet you. I am about to drop into Reoney's for just a snifter. Won't you join me?"

Sergeant Feathers hesitated. He was an abstemious young man, almost a teetotaler, and he knew that it was not likely that in the disarmingly cozy atmosphere of Reoney's Tavern, and under the influence of drink, Simon Osborne might let slip some vital information which at a more business-like interview he would not dream of divulging.

"Thanks," he said, "don't mind if I do."

They passed through the door of Reoney's together.

"Scotch for me," ordered Simon jovially. "What'll you have?"

A good start, thought Sergeant Feathers. He knew what Scotch only do. Under the influence of only two Scotches at a New Year's party some years before, he had kissed all the girls, insulted all the men, and insisted on telling his life story to everyone, whether they wanted to hear it or not. The more Scotches Simon Osborne drank, the better for a certain bright young officer's promotion!

"What'll you have?" repeated Simon. "Whisky? No? Then why not try a 'stinger'?"

"A 'stinger'?" said Feathers doubtfully. "What's that? Never heard of it."

"Oh, it's a sort of cocktail. Very pleasant, they tell me. Never touch it myself. Too mild for me."

A sort of cocktail. . . . It sounded harmless enough. Women drank cocktails. Yes, Feathers decided, a 'stinger' would suit him admirably.

He would spin it out, make it last a long time. He would need a clear head to steer Simon Osborne's unguarded tongue in the right direction when it had been lubricated by several Scotches.

While the bartender was pouring the drinks, Feathers took stock of his surroundings. They were in a small tavern that radiated solid, old-fashioned comfort. The bartender had a rosy, round face and a way with bottles that was enchanting to watch.

"I've had a few words with your housekeeper," Feathers remarked casually, watching Simon's face out of the corner of his eye.

"Have you, indeed?" said Simon equably. "Drunken old slob." He added, draining his drink at a gulp.

"Two more, Mike," he said to the bartender. "You don't want to pay any attention to what she says, young man. I never do. It's been my experience that you never get the truth out of habitual drunkards. It's a wonder the woman can speak at all. She drinks like nobody's business. Spends her whole life in a semi-coma.

"I went down to Lakelawn, leaving behind an almost full case of Scotch. Silly of me, knowing what she is, but I have to order it by the case, my boy; they won't supply single bottles on credit. Would you believe it's when I returned there wasn't a drop left! She downed it all! Must have been bloated half the time."

"Drink up, my boy," he added, "you're fallin' behind."

Feathers looked down and saw three 'stingers' lined up in front of him. Knowing Simon, the bartender had filled the elderly man's glass as soon as it was emptied and each time he had shaken a 'stinger' for Sergeant Feathers. With the benevolent eyes of Simon upon him, Feathers gulped down one drink and took a cautious sip at another.

The door opened and several people came in at once. They all knew Simon and greeted him familiarly: "Hello, Gran'paw. How's every little thing?"

"Well, you old soak, you; still dodging the heebie-jeebies?"

"How's the borkie's friend? Lucky I didn't put my shirt on that nag in the fifth like you told me, or I'd be walking 'round in a barrel tonight!"

They crowded the far end of the bar and Simon turned toward them, exchanging backchat amiably.

Feathers felt out of it. He took another sip—a long one—from his second glass and nudged Simon's sleeve. Simon turned his head. "Yes, my boy?"

"Er. . . . what'll you have?" Feathers thundered.

The flow of banter ceased and all the faces at the end of the bar turned in the stranger's direction. Feathers felt disconcerted by this joint scrutiny, but the faces relaxed in smiles, and one or two of them thanked him warmly. He did not understand for what they were thanking him until the bartender arrayed half-a-dozen foaming glasses and a double Scotch in a line and, looking pleasantly at Feathers, said that would be a dollar and ten cents. A little dazed by this general acceptance of his loud invitation to Simon, he paid and relapsed into silence.

"Moochees!" said a doleful voice in his ear. "Born moochers, all of em."

Feathers looked round and saw a lugubrious little man in a dusty derby hat standing at his elbow. He had come in a split second too late to avail himself of the Sergeant's unintentional hospitality.

"Free drinks, that's all they think of," said the newcomer sadly. "You can hardly take a deep breath without half of 'em saying: 'Thanks, I don't mind if I do. Cadgers, that's what they are. I'm not like that, thank heaven,' he said, his gloomy eyes fixed steadily on Feathers' face. "I believe in waiting till I'm asked."

They looked into each other's eyes. There was a long silence, then—

SLIMLY PANELED COTTON DRESS

Pattern 4679

Of course you can look slim—no matter what the scales may read. For Anne Adams believes that slenderness is a matter of lines rather than pounds, and she proves it smartly with Pattern 4679. Whether you're size thirty-six or fifty-two, you'll find this simple style becoming. What could be more graceful than the long front panel, slightly tapered through the waistline. Curving waist seams are cut low to give perfect fit and allow extra fullness through the skirt. The pretty V-shaped neckline is scalloped or straight-edged; the curving yokes are very flattering. The back is simply made with a darted waistline. See in the small view how striking the front panel and optional sleeve tabs would be in contrast fabric.

Pattern 4679 is available in women's sizes 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48, 50 and 52. Size 36 takes 3½ yards 35 inch fabric and ¼ yard for lace.

Send FIFTEEN CENTS (15c) in coins for this Anne Adams pattern. Write plainly SIZE, NAME, ADDRESS and STYLE NUMBER.

Are you too tall? Too short? Too plump? Too slim? If you are irregularly proportioned in any way, let the ANNE ADAMS PERFECT FOUNDATION PATTERN 4114, the guess-work out of dressmaking. This "basic figure" pattern is fitted and adjusted to your exact measurements in tissue, then cut out in muslin for a permanent record. Pin your dress patterns to it, make the necessary changes, and the finished frock will fit with perfection. Designed for sizes 14 to 20; 32 to 50. Size 16 requires 3½ yards 36 inch fabric. Police Bit Confused By Excited Help Call

BOSTON.—When an excited person telephoned police that "a man has taken the gas pipe," an ambulance and a squad of cars were sent to the scene.
By two-way radio, the desk sergeant received the following report:
"The fellow took the gas pipe,
all right, but it's a theft, not a suicide, and the gas is leaking. Get a repair crew here in a hurry!"

ATLANTA, Ga.—The Clem Green

survived Sherman's shells but hasn't fared so well against the ravages of time, will be restored

was built 97 years ago by Clem Green, who operated a ferry across the Chattahoochee river nearby.

LONDON.—Hundreds of fish,

JOURNEY IN WARTIME EUROPE—FROM VICHY TO NEW YORK

By STEVE FULTON
United Press Staff Correspondent

NEW YORK.—Traveling in wartime Europe is extremely difficult and speed virtually is impossible for the ordinary person.

Here is the story of my experiences in a journey from Vichy,
France, to New York:

The French train service was one of the best in Europe, as to comfort and speed, before the war.
Now the service familiar to American tourists has disappeared.
Long-distance trains throughout the unoccupied zones of France
are few, due to the coal shortage.
Even those that do run stop at nearly every station, making a long trip extremely monotonous.

Dining and sleeping cars are few and restricted to certain lines.
Dining cars run between Paris and Vichy, Vichy and Lyon, Lyon and Marseilles and on one or two other lines. Sleeping cars are equally scarce, as many were turned into hospital cars during the war. One line runs a sleeping car service between Bordeaux and Marseilles,
while another runs between Lyon and Marseilles and down to Can-nes on the Riviera. Still another operates between Paris and Vichy
and is used chiefly by members of the government.

Rush For Reservations
All trains have one compartment
devoted to first and second class, with four bunks each. There is always a rush to get one of these.
Reservations generally are made
days ahead.

Another item, which is quite a problem in France today, is registered luggage. Once checked, it might show up at its destination any time between three and four days, sometimes less, but the average is 48 hours.

The French customs are very thorough and don't leave anything to chance. They go through luggage and make a special search of passengers' pockets to make sure there is no currency smuggled across into Spain.

When a traveler obtains a French exit visa—which takes three to four weeks—it entitles him to export $565 in foreign currencies, which are duly checked in the passport and a special sheet is drawn up for the exchange control agent at the border.

Upon leaving France and crossing the border into Spain, further difficulties are experienced.

The Spanish railway system has been in poor shape since the revolution and trains are far off schedule. They leave late and sometimes arrive overdue as much as four to five hours.

Schedules Far Off
For instance, train service between Barcelona and Madrid is supposed to take 11 to 12 hours, but when I left Barcelona it took me 19 hours to reach Madrid.

There had been an accident on the line near Villavieja de Ebro and our train reached the wreckage where all passengers were obliged to alight and walk half a mile to the small country station.

Villavieja de Ebro is only 35 miles from Zaragoza, but nevertheless we waited five hours on the platform of this small, windy station filled with coffins while Guardia Civil stood watch over the mortuary chapel which had been established inside the waiting room.

Finally a train arrived and the passengers from the incoming train were obliged to do what we did earlier while we fought and pushed our way through the descending passengers to be able to get places
in one of the first-class compartments.

There being little fuel in Spain,
luggage is hauled from one train to another on farm wagons which look as if they had carried beet-root.

Just another example of the train service in Spain can be cited
on the Madrid to Valencia de Alcantara stretch, which is the Hispano Portuguese border. Being two hours late in reaching Valencia, we were naturally behind when arriving at Marvao, the Portuguese side of the border, and missed the connection to Lisbon by one hour.

Freight Trains Used
We remained in Marvao from 11
a. m. till 5:30 p. m. when our car was switched to a freight train which stopped at every little station and, there being no engine
for shunting purposes, our engine

did the work, making the task still longer.

We finally reached Lisbon at 1:30 a. m. instead of 3:15 p. m., after having had dinner on the way
in a little wayside station.

Once in Lisbon, the problem is getting accommodations on a ship bound for the United States. The Embassy of the American Export Lines, on which I sailed, carried 191 passengers. One of the formalities required was vaccination against smallpox. An epidemic has broken out in mild form in Lisbon several weeks ago.

But after embarking at Lisbon,
New York is not the next stop. It is Bermuda. All ships on the high seas, except the enemy's, dock at

City's "Iron Water" Des-

he explained that iron oxide deposits were left in the gravity lines.

The service director recalled that the city's water distribution system is 50 years old and said evidences of iron oxide were found every time
a main is repaired.

He said the only times previously when the water was riled were when the fire department had pumped water on fires for extended periods.

Kennedy explained that the city is pumping 1,200,000 gallons of water daily, compared with about 800-000 six years ago, although the number of wells remains practically the same. He told council the supply is limited and needs to be increased.

Storage Facilities Inadequate
"The time has also come," the director continued, "when we find water storage facilities inadequate.
The city is growing and fire protection is another factor to consider."

Kennedy said the basins at the pumping station hold 500 gallons each and that the standpipe in the east end, which is used for pressure purposes, holds 333,000 gallons.
One possible explanation of the noticeable increase in the iron oxide elements was offered by the service director when he said that
"the faster we deliver water to meet the demand, the more the iron deposits will show up," indicating that pumping pressure might be one cause of the trouble.

During the past year electric deep well turbine pumps have been placed at the basins and at some of the wells to increase the flow of the water. Kennedy pointed out, however, that the demand for water had greatly increased, with shops, and homes as well, using more.

The service director asked council not to accept just his word for it, but to call in an outside expert to check on his deductions.
Members of council indicated that they would be keeping a close watch
in the situation.

CONSTIPATION LEADS TO NERVOUSNESS DECLARES AUTHORITY

Bad Blood, Sick Headaches,
Skin Eruptions, Loss of Vitality Caused By Common Constipation.

MR. CARL KAP'S
Ten Jon Representative

A medicine containing a combination of ingredients found in no other known formula. It does not clean a hole or core out of the center of your bowels, leaving the slime on the side walls as soot in a stove pipe which may go out into your body, contaminating your blood and inner organs. Ten Jon clears the entire 32 ft. of your alimentary canal as it goes. NOT DRASTIC or SEVERE, but gradually, as they were never cleansed before, thus giving them a natural daily action.

Ten Jon No. 1 will clear your stomach, an intestines of old gas, sour-ness, fermentation and waste matter which has been known to remain in the intestines of man for even a year. A well-known medical authority states that forty of man's ailments are directly traceable to constipation. Cleansing out these poisons with TON JON gives tone to the liver, and intestines, permits freer flow of the digestive juices, makes the digestive organs clean, and sweet; and gives complete relief from indigestion,

dizzy spells, headaches, skin eruptions,
gas bloating, palpitation from gas, all-gone tired feeling, foul breath, spitting of food, sour stomach, broken sleep, shortness of breath, lump in stomach and dyspepsia. It increases the sections of the intestinal glands, and produces proper and regular elimination without irritation, thus giving tone to the blood and giving the nerves a new life. Several prominent residents were among the first to purchase Ten Jon No. 1 and actual reports prove it has helped 95 percent of those who have taken it.
This is no mere tablet, pill, or salt;
not a powder, syrup or capsule and it does not contain alcohol, or a single habit-forming drug. So, if bowel trouble or stomach distress is causing you misery, it would certainly be a mistake not to try it.

in which TON JON helped others—
and it's truly unbelievable how great my relief was, too," stated Mr. C.
E. Leyman, well-known bricklayer of Salem, Ohio, R. R. 1.
"I guess many a person goes to work in the morning when he really feels at lot more like staying right in bed, I know that I often did. For fifteen years my kidneys have given me trouble, the suffering never let up regardless of what I took. Each night I was compelled to relieve my kidneys two and three times, these passages were always slow in starting which caused considerable annoyance. Pains in the small of my back over my kidneys and in my arms kept me continually aching.
My legs would cramp making me feel irritable all the time. I had no ambition to do anything.
"I had followed TONJON advertisements closely and as a result started taking TON JON No. 3, the results were amazing. I can hardly believe I am free of pain and my sleep is more sound, not being disturbed to relieve my kidneys so often. I have plenty of ambition and can gladly recommend TONJON

Althouse Upsets Rudibaugh's, 37-26, In Rough Class A Fray

AUTO FIVE HANDS SOHIOANS FIRST LEAGUE SETBACK

News Trips Phalanx In Tough Tilt; Clowns Stop Christians

The Althouse Motors threw the Class A cage race into a middle last night at the Memorial building as they upset the powerful Rudibaugh's, 37 to 26, in a hectic battle.

The Motors gained an early lead and never waned. The affair had plenty of excitement as the two teams rocked and rolled each other up and down the floor. A couple of the lads became too excited in the closing minutes of the contest and were expelled from the battle.

With two minutes left to play, the Rudibaugh team walked off the floor in protest.

The Althouse scoring was pretty well divided, Linder, Scullion, and Wiggers collected seven points each, while Stratton and Mathers made six and five respectively. Bill Schaeffer topped the Rudibaugh point-makers with eight while Knepp and Shears each tallied six.

News Tops Phalanx

In Class B, the Salem News edged the Phalanx 25 to 20 in another rough contest. The News held a small lead in the early quarters but the Phalanx club came back strong to push the Newsies to the limit.

Burrell led the News attack with 10 points while Minamyer and Swamy aided the Phalanx with eight and seven markers respectively.

The Clowns trounced the Christians 24 to 15.

Juan and Guapone starred for the winners with eight and seven points while Stewart accounted for seven of the loser's 15 tallies.

Y. P. C. C. Upsets Cadets

There was plenty of action in the Monday night contests as the Y. P. C. C. outfit upset the high-flying Cadets, 32 to 26, in a close battle.

M. Hupley and Hickling led the winners with 10 and eight points respectively. Hanzlik topped the Cadet scoring with eight tallies while Scullion was close behind with seven. This win gives the Y. P. C. C. a strong hold on first place in the Class B race.

Fouls Beat Orphans

The F. O. E. took a close 43 to 38 win from the Orphans in Monday's Class A scrap. The F. O. E. gained their margin of victory in the free throw department, dropping in nine to the Orphan's two.

Miller was the scoring star for the winners, hitting seven field goals and one foul for 15 points while Raynes took second honors with 10 markers. Kleon was the leading point-getter for the Orphans, garnering 10 while Wagner was close behind with eight.

Demings barely nosed out the Saxons, 22 to 20, in a hot Class B contest.

Allen was the big gun for the winners, collecting 12 tallies while Spack swished eight for the Saxons.

2:30—Presbyterians vs. Friends

BOWLING RESULTS

The Owl league got off to a flying start last night at the Grate alleys with Scott's Smoke Balls grabbing the first place spot by trouncing the J-C Wildcats three straight games.

The Amateur Pros took two frames from the Trades Class No. 2 team while the Crescent Juniors gained the same verdict over the Trades Hall No. 1 outfit.

The first-place Salem News and the second-place Gem Shoes lengthened the distance between them and their closest rivals last night at the Masonic alleys, the Newsmen trimming the Sohoians all three games, and the Gem Shoes sweeping three from the Eagles. Shepard led the Gem victory with a 587 total.

The Masons went into third place as they dropped the ational Sanitary three straight. Grate Recreation added three games to their win column, on a forfeit from the Moose. Dixon hit a 587 for Grate's.

Kaufman's won three games from the Salem Cab on a forfeit in a postponed Grate Ladies' league match.

Professor Lists Rules To Check Ski Accidents

BOSTON—Nine ounces of prevention are listed for inexperienced skiers by Professor Sidney C. Hazleton of Dartmouth college.

Professor Hazleton said fractures and sprains make up three-fourths of all skiing accidents.

Here are his nine preventive measures:

1. Stick to hills and slopes your ability warrants.
2. Do not attempt trips or climbs for which you are not fitted by skill or training.
3. Learn how to slow up, stop, and to fall.
4. Use best of equipment and instructors.
5. Emergency equipment should be available.
6. Do not ski alone, a companion can go, send or yell for help.
7. Obey the rules, officials and traditions of the course.
8. Wear sufficient and proper clothing.
9. On long trips lone excursions are forbidden, and parties should check in and out properly.

Heiress Takes Lessons

HONOLULU, T. H. Jan. 7—Apparently determined to improve her diving technique at any price, Doris Duke Cromwell, tobacco heiress to whom price is no obstacle, brought Coach Fred Cady from Los Angeles to give her lessons at the pool of her sumptuous island estate.

Wins Rich Open

Johnny Bulla

Youthful Johnny Bulla of Chicago is winner of the top $3,500 prize in the rich Los Angeles Open. Bulla's 72-hole total was 281, two strokes ahead of the field. It was Bulla's first big tourney win.

Breezy Briefs Of Sport From Brietz To You

By EDDIE BRIETZ

NEW YORK, Jan. 8—That $3,500 Johnny Bulla pulled down in the Los Angeles Open was five hundred more than he earned all last year. Came at the right time, too, what with Mrs. Bulla down in Greensboro, N. C., awaiting the stork.

Those tropical park out burners must have been running backwards for Larry MacPhail, heap of money and was just as much of a sale, if any of you folks need one.

Bob Kunitz denies Casey Stengel has become a $50,000 partner in the Boston Bees.

Anyway

Here's a little jingle
To plunger Casper Stengel,
Who said he'd dig up 50 G's
To buy into the Boston Bees.

Rumor and Humor

One report said those football officials who'll work exclusively for the pros this year are guaranteed 11 games at $100 per game. What kind of basketball is this? An Oklahoma team the other night made two field goals and 18 free throws.

Lew Montgomery, Boston College's Negro star, played in a colored game at New Orleans a day or so before the Sugar bowl game and was just as much of a sensation as Charlie O'Rourke was in the main event.

Today's Guest Star

Arthur E. Patterson, New York Herald-Tribune: "The new mechanical umpire has a weakness, after all... he's cross-eyed."

Personalities

Branch Rickey, Jr., and Larry MacPhail, Jr., now are the big shots in the Dodger farm system.

Almost every sports celeb in Washington attended a farewell party for Eddy Gilmore, who has been doing a sick job of sports reporting for the Associated Press down there, when he left for New York to get ready for a European assignment.

"One Eye" Connolly is being kept busy telling coast line and fork clubs how he crashed the Rose bowl game.

Overheard

Tom Harmon: "I would rather go on relief than pay pro football."

George Halas: "Well, there isn't any Harmon trying, is there?"

Observation War!

When Earl Neale applied for the football coaching at West Virginia some years back, he says the first question the dean asked him was if he knew anything about baseball.

HOCKEY PLAYERS FROM CANADA ARE KEEPING HOUSE

Athletes Must Live On Small Allowance While In U. S.

CLEVELAND—Pity the poor hockey player who is a native of Canada. If he's single he must live on $25 a week and the rest of his salary goes to his Canadian bank.

That's the law. Penalty for failure to observe it is a fine and refusal to permit the offending player to leave Canada for another season.

The Canadian puck chaser who is married gets to keep $50 a week and, unless he has a big family, he can do all right on that.

But, say bachelors on the squad of the Cleveland Barons of the American Hockey league, there just "ain't no justice" when a fun-loving single guy has to pay rent, eat, clothe himself and try to indulge in a little recreation on a measly $25 a week.

They realize that they're probably saving more money than they would if they could use their full salary, but that happy thought doesn't compensate for the way they have to live.

Stretching Funds

Take three of the club's bachelors, for instance, Defenseman Bill McKenzie, Center Don Deacon and Winger Joffe Deslites have set up quarters together to make their $25 stretch.

Deslites is the cook and the others pitch in and handle the other household duties. It's a lot different from pre-war days when the boys lived in hotels and ate in restaurants and still wound up with money in their pockets.

There is one bright ray in the cloud for the Barons' unhappy bachelors. When they return to Canada at the end of the season they will receive the remainder of their salaries plus a 10 percent discount because their American dollars will be worth 10 cents more than the Canadian dollar.

Even at that the boys will be losing 10 per cent because they used to get a 20 per cent premium when they took the money over the border themselves. Under the present system the Canadian government figures make a sizeable difference between the money on the difference between the 10 and 20 per cent premium.

Goalie Moe Roberts, American-born, saw a chance to save some money along with his Canadian teammates so he moved in with the boys to make it a foursome.

What was that someone said about single bliss?

DELAY BONDS FOR CITY'S FIRE TRUCK

Solons Withhold Action As Morris Warns of Reduced Income

10-mill limitation for the purchase of a new fire truck, the financial outlook was good. Threatened now with decreased revenue within the 10-mill limitation, Morris said he felt the city was fortunate in not having yet sold the bonds and urged that the sale be stopped "until we know where we stand."

Solicitor Henry L. Reese said the city had been within its legal bounds in its action to date on the fire truck but also advised waiting for the financial report before selling the bonds.

Bond Approval Doubtful

The solicitor also explained that in view of the questionable financial outlook, a bonding company probably wouldn't approve the bonds at the present time, anyway.

Morris said the city could save printing and advertising expenses right now.

Councilman Charles Rheutan, chairman of the safety committee, made the only other comment before Safety Director J. T. Rafferty and Service Director Charles Kennedy, two members of the board of control, agreed to delay action on the fire truck. Mayor Norman Phillips is the other board member.

Rheutan said he had backed the fire truck program all along and felt that if there was any possible way of getting it, the city should do so. "However," he added, "if finances are bad, well, that's another situation."

FDR Highlights On Budget

changes in the world situation in the last six months, we realize how tentative all present estimates must be.

We shall actually expend more than 25 billion dollars for defense within a 3-year period. This can be accomplished, but only if management, labor and consumers co-operate to the utmost.

It is our policy to retain the ideals and objectives of our social and economic programs . . . because of the defense effort some of these programs can be carried on at a lower cost.

We are definitely maintaining the principles of parity and soil conservation.

I deem it vital that the congress give consideration to the inclusion in the old-age and survivors insurance system and the unemployment compensation system of workers not now covered.

It seems appropriate to defer construction projects that interfere with the defense program by diverting manpower and materials.

A start should be made this year to meet a larger percentage of defense payments from current tax receipts . . . because it is the fixed policy of the government that no citizen should make any abnormal net profit out of national defense. I am not satisfied that existing laws are in this respect adequate.

I question the significance of a statutory debt limit, except as it serves as a fiscal monitor . . . the main fiscal problem is not the rise of the debt, but the rise of debt charges in relation to the development of our resources.

The bonds of the United States government are the safest securities in the world because they are backed by the best asset in the world, the productive capacity of the American people. Our tax burden is still moderate compared to that of most other countries.

If this war should be followed, as I hope it will, by peace in a world of good neighbors, then the complete elimination of competitive armaments will become possible. Only in such a world can economic stability be restored.

What German Bombers Did To the Heart of London

This radiophoto, first received in the United States for several days because of interruption of sending facilities in London, graphically shows what German bombers did to the heart of London in one of their night-long raids. The picture was taken in the Paternoster Row area. The dome of Old Bailey is in the background. The picture was taken from the dome of St. Paul's cathedral.

17 BILLION ASKED IN RECORD BUDGET

"World at War" Is Reflected In Roosevelt Fund Estimates

National income, the President predicted, also would rise to a new record in the fiscal year—exceeding 1939 by $7,000,000,000—and thereby would produce the greater tax yields.

Turning to non-defense costs, which he cut $600,000,000 from the 1941 totals, the chief executive explained the absence of deeper reductions in these words:

Democracy at Stake

"Democracy as a way of life is equally at stake. Only by maintaining these activities (relief, social security, regular government activities, etc.) can we claim the effective use of resources which our democratic system is expected to yield, and thus justify the expenditures required for its defense."

Summarizing the $28,480,000,000 defense program, undertaken since last June, the President said it included $13,704,000,000 to multiply the army nearly six times (from 250,000 to 1,400,000) and equip it with the "most modern devices of motorized and mechanical warfare;" $11,587,000,000 to double the navy; $1,902,000,000 (of federal money plus other private billions) to help expand factories to produce airplanes at an eventual 50,000 a year pace and to make other weapons; and $1,287,000,000 for such other defense activities as power projects and FBI surveillance of saboteurs.
